INTRODUCTION

The Department of the Treasury and the National Archives of Australia have developed this Records Authority to set out the requirements for keeping or destroying records for the revised core business areas of Commonwealth-State Financial Relations, Foreign Investment, Markets Regulation and Portfolio Governance. It represents a significant commitment on behalf of the Department of Treasury to understand, create and manage the records of its activities.

This Authority is based on the identification and analysis of the business of the Department of the Treasury. It takes into account the agency's legal and organisational records management requirements, and the interests of stakeholders, the agency and the National Archives of Australia.

This Authority gives the Department of the Treasury permission under the Archives Act 1983, for the destruction, retention or transfer to the National Archives of Australia of the records described. The Authority sets out those records that need to be retained as national archives and the minimum length of time that temporary records need to be kept. Retention periods for these temporary records are based on: an assessment of business needs; broader organisational accountability requirements; and community expectations, and are approved by the National Archives of Australia on the basis of information provided by the agency.

The Department of the Treasury may use the following tools to dispose of their records:

- This Records Authority used in conjunction with the 2004/440690 Records Authority covering its agency specific records;

- general records authorities, such as the Administrative Functions Disposal Authority (AFDA), covering business processes and records common to Australian Government agencies; and

- normal administrative practice (NAP) which allows for the destruction of records where the records are duplicated, unimportant or for short-term use only.

As changes in circumstances may affect future records management requirements, the periodic review of this Authority is recommended. All amendments must be approved by the National Archives.

Advice on using this Authority and other records management matters is available from the National Archives' website at www.naa.gov.au or by contacting the Agency Service Centre at recordkeeping@naa.gov.au or (02) 6212 3610.
APPLICATION OF THIS AUTHORITY

1. This Authority consists of amendments to the 2004/4406090 Records Authority of the Department of the Treasury and should be used in conjunction with it. Except for the amendment discussed below, all amendments consist of wholly new temporary records classes to be added to existing core businesses.

2. This Authority replaces class 9131 from records authority 2004/4406090 with class 21034. Class 9131 has been terminated and can no longer be used to sentence or destroy records after the date of issue of this Authority. Class 21034 includes revised records description that excludes long term temporary records which are now covered by a new class in this Authority (class 21033).

3. The Department of the Treasury will need to review 2004/4406090 sentencing decisions on relevant records that have not been destroyed where this Authority provides for longer retention periods.

4. This Authority should be used in conjunction with the Administrative Functions Disposal Authority (AFDA) issued by the National Archives to cover administrative records common to Australian Government agencies.

5. This Authority should be used in conjunction with general disposal authorities issued by the National Archives that cover other types of records that may be created by the Department of the Treasury, such as encrypted records and source records that have been copied.

6. This Authority is to be used to sentence records. Sentencing involves the examination of records in order to identify the individual disposal class to which they belong. This process enables sentencers to determine how long records need to be kept. Advice on sentencing is available from the National Archives.

7. Where the method of recording information changes (for example from a manual system to an electronic system, or when information is migrated from one system to a new system) this Authority can still be used to sentence the records created, providing the records document the same core business. The information must be accessible for the period of time prescribed in this Authority. The Department of the Treasury will need to ensure that any software, hardware or documentation required to enable continuing access to the information is available for the periods prescribed.

8. In general, retention requirements indicate a minimum period for retention. The Department of the Treasury may extend minimum retention periods if it considers that there is an administrative need to do so, without further reference to the National Archives. Where the Department of the Treasury believes that its accountability will be substantially compromised because a retention period or periods are not adequate, it should contact the National Archives for review of the retention period.

9. The Department of the Treasury may destroy certain records without formal authorisation as a normal administrative practice. This usually occurs where the records are duplicated, facilitative or for short-term use only. NAP does not replace the arrangements agreed to in records authorities. Advice and guidance on destroying records as a normal administrative practice is available from the National Archives' website at www.naa.gov.au.

10. From time to time the National Archives will place a freeze on some groups of records to prevent their destruction. Further information about disposal freezes and whether they affect the application of this Authority is available from the National Archives website at www.naa.gov.au.

11. Records in the care of the Department of the Treasury should be appropriately stored and preserved. The Department of the Treasury needs to meet this obligation to ensure that the records remain authentic and accessible over time. Under section 31 of the Archives Act 1983, access arrangements are required for records that are in the open access period (currently after 30 years).

12. Appropriate arrangements should be made with the National Archives when records are to be transferred into custody. The National Archives accepts for transfer only those records designated as national archives.

13. Advice on how to use this Authority is available from the Department of the Treasury records manager. If there are problems with the application of the Authority that cannot be resolved, please contact the National Archives.
